Republican Leader Disappears From Pittsburg When Subpoena Is Issued At Instance Of The Receiver.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 2.—T. Lee Clark, former cashier of the Enterprise National bank, who committed suicide when confronted with the revelation of $300,000 shortage in his accounts, in a letter written just before his death, lays the blame for his ruin upon W. H. Andrews, territorial delegate from New Mexico and republican leader. Clark's letter, written the night preceding his suicide, when, with Bank Examiner Cunningham, he worked till midnight on the books of the institution, is as follows:

"Dearest Wife and Children: In ten hours or less I will be in the other world. You have been a dear, good wife to me. Andrews has worked my ruin. Dear wife, keep all the insurance for yourself and babies. How hard it is to leave you all! I have made a desperate effort to keep things going until I would get the road fixed, but it has been too slow. The examiner is here and I am ruined. Do forgive me, it is not my fault. I have been shamefully robbed. The bank will get everything but the life insurance."

Was Treasurer of Road.

Clark was treasurer of the Santa Fe Central railroad, of which W. H. Andrews was president. This road is in New Mexico and is about 117 miles long, running from Santa Fe to Torrance, with a branch now projected to Albuquerque. The railway was capitalized at $2,500,000 and is bonded to the extent of $2,500,000. Of this $2,000,000 of bonds has been issued, while $500,000 has been kept in the treasury for improvements.

One week after the closing of the Enterprise National, Examiner Cunningham brought suit against W. H. Andrews for more than $50,000, charging him with fraudulently conspiring

MINISTER PAYS NEGRO TO MURDER ENEMY

Black Man Slays Four Children When He Finds Intended Victim Is Absent From Home.

Valdosta, Ga., Nov. 2.—The Rev. J. G. Rawlings, now under death sentence, has made a confession, admitting that he hired Al Moore, a negro, to kill W. L. Carter, the father of the children with whose murder he is charged, and with whom he had been engaged in a bitter feud for many months. Rawlings declares that the killing of the Carter children was not in the "trade," and that he was particularly to caution the negro that the children must not be harmed.

Rawlings says Joe Bently, "Mitch" Johnson and himself made a deal with Moore several days before the murder was committed. The understanding was that Moore was to kill Carter for a consideration, but that nothing further was to be done. Moore was ready for the job at once, and he and Bently wanted to kill Carter the Sunday night before the tragedy, but could not get a buggy to go to Carter's house.

Accordingly the negro decided to wait, and the following Sunday he drove out to the Carter home alone. Carter, himself, was not at home, and the negro attacked the four children of the doomed man and murdered them in cold blood. When Carter returned he found their lifeless bodies.

Carter at once remembered the feud with Rawlings, and complained against him. Rawlings and his two sons, aged 15 and 17 years, respectively, were arrested and charged with murder. All were convicted and death sentences passed. The case was taken to the Supreme court, but Rawlings declares he is indifferent to that tribunal's decision and that he has confessed simply to save his sons.

COL. GEORGE HALL WAS VISITOR HERE

Talked in Entertaining Manner of His Show Interests—Daughter Was Recently Married.

Col. George Hall of Evansville was a pleasant caller at the Gazette office last evening. As usual the veteran circus man displayed a lively interest in the things going on in Janesville and the world about him. When he chanced to hear about the meeting of the mutual policy-holders he said that he didn't take any stock in life insurance, because a fellow had to die to win out, or in fire insurance either for that matter. The Hargreaves circus, with which Miss Mabel Hall, the colonel's daughter, is identified, has gone to Havana, Cuba, for a twenty weeks' engagement. Miss Hall was recently married to Frank Longbotham, the treasurer of the show. The elephant Jumbo II, which Miss Hall has trained for a clever act, surprised the boat people by walking aboard the boat without any demonstration. Only a few weeks before when an engagement had been made in a New York theatre, he absolutely refused to go in under the lights and the project had to be abandoned. Mr. Hill, one of Col. Hall's agents, has contracted for a year with the Florio show, which is owned by Denver capitalists. The Evansville showman is sending animals hither for a new act in which leopards and jaguars are being worked.

OWNS REBATES ARE BEING PAID

California Fruit Shippers Are Given Bonuses by the Railways.

MANAGER TELLS OF SERVICE

Declares Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway and Santa Fe Refrigerator Dispatch Are Owned by the Same Interests.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Admitting that rebates are given to shippers in the California fruit service by practically all private lines, J. S. Leads, general manager of the Santa Fe refrigerator dispatch, enquired the inquiry being conducted here by the interstate commerce commission to show the relations between railroads and companies engaged in the business of refrigerating freight in transit.

Mr. Leads said these rebates were necessary to his company, because all his competitors were granting them. He asserted that he could not break up the practice without precipitating a rate war.

The testimony was confined to the business of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railway and the Santa Fe refrigerator dispatch, which corporations, according to officials of both who were on the stand, are owned by the same interests.

Ownership Is Same.

Mr. Leads was followed on the stand by Edward Chambers, freight traffic manager of the Santa Fe railway, who prefaced a mass of unimportant testimony with the statement that the stock of the corporations mentioned is owned by the same interests and that the corporations have the same president.

The principal witness was Mr. Leads, who gave startling testimony concerning rebates and declared his inability to break up the practice. He said his company operates 4,500 cars and obtains additional equipment by interchanging with the American Refrigerator Transit company and the Michigan Central railway. The cars operated by the Santa Fe refrigerator dispatch, said Mr. Leads, are owned by the Santa Fe railway and are leased by the dispatch line, which pays the railway 5 per cent annually on the value of the equipment, based on the cost of the cars. Mr. Leads explained the details of the contract. The dispatch line receives all the earnings of the commissioners and makes all the current repairs.

"In other words," said Attorney Barry, acting for the commission, "the supply of cars is at the option of the Santa Fe railway?"

"Up to the present time," said Mr. Leads.

It was brought out that the Santa Fe railway pays no mileage for the refrigerator cars operating on that line, this concession forming a part of the agreement under which the dispatch line handles all of the refrigerator cars owned by the railway. When the dispatch line cars are diverted to other railways mileage is charged. The

Odessa The Scene Of Serious Rioting By Lawless Mobs This Morning—Houses Plundered From Top To Bottom.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]

Warsaw, Nov. 2.—Last night was given over to a demonstration by the people, which lasted until daylight. It culminated in a clash with the troops and many casualties resulted.

Street Fighting

Moscow, Nov. 2.—Street fighting is occurring today between the nationalists and socialists.

Civil War Rages

Nikolaoff, Nov. 2.—Civil war rages in this city. Scores are killed and wounded. Over two hundred bombs have been thrown and the town is an inferno of death and tumult. All the shops were destroyed after being looted by the criminals. Respectable people are at the mercy of the mob. The police are accused of instigating the devastation. The firing is incessant and ambulances filled with mutilated dead and dying are constantly passing.

Place Responsibility

St. Petersburg, Nov. 2.—A manifesto was issued by the Czar and posted in the streets this afternoon, calling upon the people to support the government, so that the new regime may be successfully inaugurated, and explaining that if it failed the responsibility would rest upon them and not on the government. A continuance of the disturbances this afternoon is reported in Odessa, Moscow, Warsaw, Nikolaoff, Kieff and Sevastopol. At Kieff the mob attacked the Jews, the police and soldiers permitting it. At Tomsk the procurator has ordered the arrest of the chief of police on account of the brutality of the Cossacks, when the latter, under orders of the chief, dealt severely with the people.

At Warsaw.

Warsaw, Nov. 2.—Utterly disregarding the orders of General Kaulbars, the workmen are parading the streets singing "God Save Poland" and carrying the Polish national standard. The Cossacks this afternoon fired on the crowd and killed three and wounded three.

Socialists' Demands

This afternoon the socialists demanded immediate self government for Poland. A company of Gendarmes with the officers appeared at a meeting at Vistula and the railway employers asked permission to listen to the speeches, so as to become acquainted with the situation. They were greeted with enthusiasm and given seats.

Anti-Government

Radom, Poland, Nov. 2.—An anti-government demonstration has culminated here today in a riot, followed by a clash between the people and troops, and many casualties resulted. The crowds destroyed much property. Barricades were erected on the streets and bombs thrown at the soldiers. The troops fired and the people returned the volley. Both sides lost many killed and wounded.

City Quieter

Odessa, Nov. 2.—The city is quieter. It is feared that it is only a lull. Liquor is flowing freely.

Roughs Attack Jews.

During the fighting between roughs and Jews in Dalitskaya street Tuesday night thirty-seven persons were killed, and eighty-one seriously wounded were taken to the hospital.

A most serious clash took place Wednesday at the university, where students were haranguing the crowds. Cossacks charged, using their rifles, lances and whips, killing ten and wounding fifty persons. The Cossacks also broke the windows of the buildings with their lances, and some students were driven into the court yard and were whipped by the Cossacks and police.

A bomb was thrown in Deribras street, killing fifteen persons and wounding forty. Altogether six bombs were thrown in various parts of the city, but the number killed and wounded cannot be learned.

In the Jewish quarter the riots took an anti-Semitic shape. The Jews retaliated and hurled missiles from their windows at the infuriated mobs. Some of them had revolvers and used them. In other districts the fighting was between the so-called loyalists and the ultra-revolutionists.

Attack Loyalist Parade.

There were many loyalist processions, composed almost entirely of girls carrying portraits of the czar and the national flag, and shouting the national anthem. A general heading one of these processions was shot and killed.

Six bombs were thrown in various parts of town. One of these scattered a party of Cossacks who were guarding the residence of Gen. Kaulbars, commander-in-chief of this district, where a defensive barricade was being erected.

Penalty for Adulterating Food.

The penalty in Germany for adulterating food is six months in prison and a fine of 1,500 marks.

The civil guard was outnumbered and practically helpless, although its members used their revolvers unhesitatingly.

The Jews made a stout resistance, and their successful bravery entailed lamentable sacrifices. It is impossible to ascertain the number of killed and wounded as high as 2,000, many by bombs, which the mob used wholesale. Not until late at night, when the murderous work had gone unchecked for hours, were the troops brought, cordons placed around the Jewish quarter, and quiet restored.

Troops Fight with Mob.

Kieff, Nov. 2.—The mob broke into the town hall Tuesday night and tore down the czar's portrait. A lawyer named Rattner cut out the face of the portrait, thrust his own head through the opening and harangued the crowd. The troops arrived and fired a number of volleys, killing forty persons. Three hundred in the crowd were arrested.

The mob dragged many troopers from their horses and shot them on the ground.

A band of workmen forcibly entered Rattner's home Wednesday morning and tore him to pieces.

Jew hating began at midnight Tuesday night. Many shops were wrecked and plundered. The demolition continued Wednesday morning. Not a shop escaped. The crowd fought for the possession of the plunder, which included jewelry and watches.

Patrols, who were constantly passing, watched the mob unflinchingly and did not interfere. Police and Cossacks joined in the plundering. Officers arrested three soldiers for stealing.

A man with a sackful of looted watches sold his plunder openly at auction in the street.

People are seen everywhere carrying bundles of velvets, silks and other goods. Nobody interfered with the looting until late in the day, when vigilance committees were formed. These forced some of the thieves to disgorge.

Rioting began again Wednesday night. The Jews fired on their attackers and upon the troops from their houses. Their fire was returned. Some of the houses were stormed and their occupants thrown into the streets. The residences of many wealthy Jews have been wrecked. The Jews threaten to massacre the Christians to-morrow.

Blood Flows in Warsaw.

Warsaw, Nov. 2.—Twenty persons were killed and upwards of a hundred wounded in the encounters Wednesday night between the mobs and the troops. At 10 o'clock a crowd gathered before the town hall and demanded the release of political prisoners. The chief of police liberated 200 who had been arrested during the last few days, but refused to release twelve who were arrested by order of the central government.

The crowd then commenced to smash the doors and windows of the town hall, whereupon the chief of police telephoned the barracks for assistance, and a force of hussars and Cossacks with a battery of artillery galloped to the scene.

The hussars charged the mobs, killing sixteen persons and wounding seventy-three. Later there was an encounter between infantry and a mob in the Bank square, when the troops fired into the crowd, killing four and wounding thirty.

The authorities are charged with ignoring the imperial manifesto and general depression prevails everywhere. There is a complete deadlock in business and traffic. Even the employees of the drug stores have again gone out on strike.

The streets and squares are full of troops. The people are attempting to organize street meetings, but they are promptly dispersed by bayonet charges. A meeting of the Vienna railroad employees was broken up by the police.

Anarchy at Kazan.

Kazan, Nov. 2.—Further details of Tuesday's massacre increase the feeling of horror which it has aroused here. The police and Cossacks were, seemingly, without any authority turned loose on the people in the main street in front of the Assize court. Many school children were among the wounded.

During the night, after the people terror-stricken had sought refuge in their homes, Cossacks and police broke into and gutted a number of stores.

SKIES FOR THE PRESENT MONTH

NOVEMBER IS THE TIME FOR SHOWERS OF METEORS.

EXPECT NOTHING STARTLING

Little Bodies Are Burned Up in Traveling Through Atmosphere—A Simple Experiment.

On November 7 at 9 o'clock, and November 22 at 8 o'clock, the Great Dipper will be due north and scarcely above the horizon. Cassiopeia will be nearly 30 degrees east of north of the zenith. Andromeda, Perseus and Taurus will be between the zenith and the eastern horizon. Orion is then just rising in the east. Its belt just showing above the horizon. The Galaxy then lies nearly east and west almost overhead. Its most brilliant region in November being between Cassiopeia and Cygnus, which lies to the west of the zenith. Cetus is well up in the southeastern sky, apparently having appropriated a large tract of sky all to itself. The wonderful variable star Mira is in this constellation. Pegasus will be high in the southwestern horizon, above Aquarius and Capricornus. Aquila will be near the western horizon and in the southern branch of the Galaxy, and Castor and Pollux just above the northeastern horizon in Gemini.

The Moon.
On November 3 the moon completes the first quarter of its orbit, on the 12th the second quarter, when it is full moon, on the 19th the third or last quarter, and on the 26th the fourth quarter, when it is known as new moon. On the second the moon and Mars will be on the meridian together, Mars being some 3 degrees south of the moon. On Dec. 30 they will again be on the meridian together and pass within four minutes of each other, so close that they will seem almost to touch, the moon passing just to the north of Mars. When in conjunction on Nov. 2 they will be in the constellation Sagittarius. On the fifth the moon will be in conjunction with Saturn, in Aquarius, on the 13th with Jupiter in Taurus, on the 24th with Venus in Libra, in the early morning. The moonlight evenings will be from Nov. 1 to Nov. 17.

Jupiter.
On the 12th, Jupiter will rise at 5:20 p. m. and will be in opposition on the 24th. It rises nearly in the northeast and is the brightest star for the month, in our evening skies.

November Meteors.
Nearly every persons has at some time witnessed the fall of a meteor, or shooting star, in the evening sky. has, for a second or two, watched its course from where the eye first noted its sudden appearance to where it vanished as quickly as it appeared, leaving a glowing trail of soft light along its path. Most frequently they appear and vanish at great heights, being entirely consumed by the intense heat developed as they penetrate the earth's atmosphere. Sometimes heavier ones fall glow more brightly, and reach the earth. Others still heavier come with intense light, a rushing sound in the air, and frequently exploding with several sharp reports, the pieces quickly falling to the ground, where they have often been found while still hot. In cases where they burst or explode, the

ARE LOOKING FOR A VERY SLICK STRANGER

Mr. Smooth Man Works Throughout the Country Districts Fooling the Farmers.

There is a smooth man working in this section of the state that has a clever swindle with which he is taking in the property owners in rural districts. The police of Rockford have offered five hundred dollars for his capture and the Madison police are also on his trail. Thus far there are no indications that he has begun his work in Rock county, but for fear he may come, the following description is printed that he may fail to secure any suckers.

He will look over several farmsteads for sale—some distant from the county seat. Finally concludes to buy one. Tells the farmer that he is a widower and is buying the farm for his son with whom he intends to live. Asks him where there is a notary public near. Learns there is a notary public at the village near the farm. Asks the farmer if he has the abstract of the place and gets the same. It explains that he wants his lawyer to look it over. He then calls on the notary and asks him to make out the power of attorney, saying that he wants to send it to some friend or relative in the east. After getting this—with the notary's seal upon it—he either makes or has made a duplicate of the seal. He then goes to the county seat and calls upon some real estate man or lawyer and tells him that he is about to buy this farm and asks him to kindly look over the abstract and the county records, to see if the title is correct. This, of course, is found all right. He then asks the lawyer or real estate man to draw up the deed for the farm, explaining who he is and why he wants this particular farm. He then says that as the price of the farm is taking all his ready money and he has no more, he would like to make out the deed in the way of buildings, fences, etc., asks the real estate man or lawyer if he knows of any money lender who would like to make this kind of a loan. The real estate man of course sees a little per cent, and accordingly tells him that he will secure the money for him all right. He, Mr. Hoover, then takes the deed which has already been drawn up, to his hotel. There he forges the name of the farmer and his wife, then places the notary's seal on the deed in the way of an acknowledgment, and after a suitable time calls again on the real estate man and shows him the deed properly signed and acknowledged. He again explains that as he has paid out all his ready money he would like to secure the amount asked for on the place as soon as possible, so that he can return home and move his family on the farm. The real estate man sends for the party who intends to loan the money. This party on his arrival looks over the deed, takes a note for the amount asked for, also a mortgage on the farm, to secure the payments of the principal of the note and interest thereon, which he records, and then the money is paid over and this "Foxy Gentleman" skips the town.

WEATHER IS TO CHANGE OFTEN

WITH AUTUMNAL RAINS AND BLIZZARDOUS SNOW STORMS

DURING THE ENSUING MONTH

Rev. I. H. Hick's Forecast of Weather for November—He Also Gives Some Advice.

Much changing of weather from warm to cold and cold to warm with many autumnal showers, and two snow storms, one of which is scheduled as a genuine November blizzard, are the essentials of the Rev. I. H. Hick's prognostications for the month of November. His predictions are in part:

The first storm period, which is regular, is central on the sixth, extending from the fourth to the ninth. With the exception of the Moon's passage over the celestial equator on the eighth, the volcanic equinox, and possibly the perihelion of the planet Venus, also on the eighth, will be the only disturbing factors present at this period. After two or four days of cool, fair and frosty weather about the fifth, the barometer will begin falling in the west, a change to cloudy and warmer weather, and autumnal rains, probably ending in snow, will pass eastward over the country during the sixth, seventh and eighth. The regular rise of barometer and change to much cooler, clearing weather will follow closely on the western side of the storm area.

More Autumnal Rains.
Central on the eleventh and twelfth is the second storm period, reactionary. The volcanic reactionary and the Moon in apogee are the direct perturbing causes. The opposition of the planet Jupiter with the Earth and Sun falls on the twenty-fourth, which fact must also be taken into account for the remaining storm periods of the month. A change to warmer, clearing weather, southerly winds, growing cloudiness and more autumnal rains will make their transit from west to east across the country on and touching the eleventh and twelfth. The conditions named above precede all storms and the change to colder and clearing, freezing weather at night are sure to follow from the west after the storms.

A November Cold Wave.
The third storm period regular is central on the seventeenth, covering the fifteenth and nineteenth. The regular volcanic equinox is the main cause of disturbance at this time. The Moon is at north declination and last quarter, on the fifteenth and nineteenth respectively, while the great planet, Jupiter, is nearing the date of his opposition with the Sun and Earth. About the time of this period some very decided autumnal storms and gales may be expected. Low barometric pressure, on any part of land, lake or sea, will be an unusually sure harbinger of forceful atmospheric disturbances. The north Atlantic, on the high sea and touching the coasts on both sides, will be visited by high, if not destructive gales, on the 15th, or one of the remaining periods in November. If they are to strike at this third storm period, abundant and timely indications will appear to those who are willing to watch and heed. A November cold wave will follow this period, covering the north, and affecting materially weather conditions quite into the south.

Very Stormy Weather.
The fourth storm period—reactionary—is central on the twenty-second and twenty-third. The Mercury disturbance covers this period, with the Moon on the celestial equator on the twenty-second, with Earth between Jupiter and the Sun on the twenty-fourth, and the Venus disturbance just beginning. The disturbances of this period will begin as early as the twenty-first with falling barometer and threatening weather. On and about the twenty-second and twenty-third general storms will be in progress from west to east, with indications good for a continued spell of very stormy weather for the balance of the month. If general storms have not visited land and sea at either of the last two periods, it may be set down as almost an absolute certainty that wide and violent disturbances will appear during the last two periods, and that these last two periods will be so prolonged and intensified as to make almost one continuous time of perturbations.

A Genuine Blizzard.
The fifth storm period—regular—is precipitated by existing causes, so that it will begin as early as the twenty-fifth and the twenty-sixth. Normally it would be central on the twenty-ninth and reach its culmination early in December. The Mercury period is central on the twenty-sixth the late of new Moon in perigee. The Venus disturbance is distinctly in force. The Moon is not only in perigee and in conjunction with Earth and Sun, but at extreme declination south, all blending with the regular volcanic equinox, and under the magnetic and electrical strain of Jupiter's opposition with Sun and Earth. A strong combination, to be sure. A marked change to warmer, with a low and a falling barometer, will be advancing from the west by the twenty-sixth. General autumnal rains will follow and march eastward over the country during the last four or five days of the month. Rain will turn to snow and sleet—the latter particularly in the northward—and almost a genuine November blizzard over much of the country will come with the high barometer sure to press close behind the last stages of the storms. Shippers on the Lakes and the north Atlantic will be in almost certain danger at this time.

General Caution.
Great inconvenience and much loss are encountered very often by not planning to protect perishable products against the first real dash of winter. Those closing November storms should be kept in mind and everything likely to suffer from autumnal storms and cold should be gathered. King Boreas will come from the north country at this time.

FARSON ANNOUNCES THAT HE OWNS ROAD

Settles Any Disputes Regarding This Question by His Declaration.

John H. Farson, in speaking with the Rockford aldermen and H. H. Clough in Chicago, where he entertained them at a banquet Monday evening, announced that the statements published that the Beloit and Janesville line had been purchased by him for other parties was wrong. "I purchased this line myself," said Mr. Farson, "and believe it will prove a good investment. The opportunity presented itself to make the purchase and the stockholders of the Rockford & Janesville company not being ready to take over that line with the other holdings, I decided to purchase it myself. I think the territory adjacent to the line is of a sort that will contribute nicely to an electric railway system and the good returns which have been enjoyed by the former company will increase as the line grows. The line looked good to me and I took it up in my own name."

Offer to Refund Money if Hyomei Does Not Cure Catarrh.

To the Editor of the Janesville Gazette:

We have been asked, recently if the advertisement printed in your columns regarding Hyomei were true, where we offer to refund the money if this treatment does not cure catarrh. We wish you would please print this letter in as conspicuous a place as possible in your paper, saying that we absolutely agree to refund the money to any purchaser of a Hyomei outfit if it does not cure catarrh.

This outfit consists of an inhaler of a convenient size to be carried in the vest pocket so that the user can breathe Hyomei four or five times daily. With this is included a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei. The outfit sells for $1.00 and is a most economical treatment for a catarrh lasts a lifetime and there is enough Hyomei for several weeks' use, while extra bottles can be obtained for 50 cents.

We trust this letter will settle any doubts that may have arisen as to our willingness to refund the money for a Hyomei outfit, in case the purchaser is not perfectly satisfied.

Respectfully yours,

— FORTY YEARS AGO —

Jamesville Daily Gazette, Thursday, November 2, 1865.—General Harrison C. Hobart, the Democratic candidate for Governor, speaks at the Court Room this evening, in behalf of the ticket represented by himself. The General is an old stumpster, and makes a smooth and pleasant speech in support of what are called, out of politeness, Democratic principles, as any man we know.

Fire.—Brewery Burned.—About 1 o'clock last night our citizens were startled by the ringing of fire bells and the cry of fire, a bright glare of light at the same time turning night into day. It was soon ascertained that the alarm proceeded from the building of the brewery, and dwelling attached, at the lower end of Main street. The fire communicated in the brewery, but as nothing had been done in that building since Sunday, it is not known how the flames spread with great rapidity and before the family were awakened, egress from the second story by the stairs was entirely cut off and the inmates of the chambers were compelled to make their exit by the window, without saying anything but what they had on. Of the five children, a little boy came near being left in the building and burned to death. He was only discovered when an effort was made to remove part of the bedding. The buildings were owned by John Roettinger, who had rented them to John Henry, the latter of whom owned the fixtures throughout. The loss of furniture and fixtures is estimated at about $2,000, but what the insurance we have been unable to ascertain.

Captive Minnesota Woman Among the Sioux.—When the buffalo hunters returned from their last hunt, they brought in word that they had met a party of Sioux (we did not learn of what band) and had seen among them a captive white woman, evidently one of the four snared from the Minnesota massacre. She is said to be jealously guarded by an old Indian, whose property she is, and who demanded as the price of her release, twenty buffalo running horses. This of course the hunters could not give as horses of this kind are worth from twenty to thirty pounds apiece, but those competent to judge think that this Indian ought to be induced by giving him about twenty pounds, worth of red cloth, beads, tobacco and Indian trappings, to give up this white captive. So we may hope to see this unfortunate woman upon the return of their hunters from their fall trip.—Red River Nor-wester, Oct. 21.

New York Letter.
New York.—Railroad stocks are being dealt in to a considerable extent at present in Wall street and there are also a few bull and bear movements on foot, which it is difficult to explain. There are persistent rumors about that another Hill-Harrison war is imminent because of the reported intention of the Burlington to build to Salt Lake City. If these plans are carried out the Burlington will parallel the Union Pacific between Cheyenne and Salt Lake.

Alexander Robertson, general manager of the St. Louis Terminal will take up his new duties as general manager of the Western Maryland system the first of November, having charge of all departments. As general manager of the terminal during the World's Fair he established a wide reputation for himself in the operating department, and the officials regret his departure.

Much activity is reported among the lines controlled by Vanderbilt interests. The Cincinnati agencies of the Vanderbilt fast freight lines are to be consolidated on November 1st, and at St. Louis freight traffic representatives of New York Central lines are to hold a mass meeting the second and third of November.

The Milwaukee Southern, which proposes to build with St. Louis capital from Milwaukee to St. Louis, is accused by Milwaukee's mayor of offering to sell out to the Wisconsin Central for $100,000, and then again for $150,000. The charge is denied, and the accused asked to prove it.

The Pennsylvania company's eighteen hour train from New York has reached Chicago only four times behind its schedule since it began its daily trip of 812 miles, 142 days ago. The greatest detention was thirteen minutes, while on the other three occasions it was late from two to nine minutes. The day the train was thirteen minutes behind schedule time, when it stopped in the Union station, it was blocked by an accident to another train less than half a mile from the station.

In the final report of the Wisconsin tax commission for the current year the total increase in the railway valuations of the state is $10,755,100, and the aggregate valuation is $228,810,000. On this sum the companies will pay $2,579,290 in taxes to the state. The valuation of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad is $74,500,000, with a tax of $89,811; of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, $73,700,000, tax $88,302; Wisconsin Central, $22,000,000, tax $24,792; Soo line, $8,800,000, tax $99,109. The railroads are now contesting the ad valorem law on a charge of nonuniformity.

DISCRIMINATING LADIES.

Enjoy Unharm Herpelide on Account of Its Distinctiveness.
The ladies who have used Newbro's Herpelide speak of it in the highest terms, for its quick effect in cleansing the scalp of dandruff and also for its excellence as a general hair-dressing. It makes the scalp feel fresh and it allows that itching which dandruff will cause. Newbro's Herpelide effectively cures dandruff, as it destroys the germ that causes it. The same germ causes hair to fall out, and later baldness; in killing it, Herpelide stops falling hair and prevents baldness. It is also an ideal hair dressing for it lends an aristocratic charm to the hair that is quite distinctive. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpelide Co., Detroit, Mich.

At all events it is reasonably certain that the infant czarowitz will never experience the perplexities of being an absolute monarch.

There is so much smoke all over Russia that even the czar is beginning to suspect that there is some fire.

FOREIGN COMMERCE.
The foreign commerce transacted by and for the manufacturers of the United States will amount to more than a billion dollars in the calendar year 1905. In the nine months ending with September, 1905, for which the Department of Commerce and Labor, through its Bureau of Statistics, has just announced its figures of our foreign commerce, the imports of materials for use in manufacturing amounted to 422 million dollars and the exports of manufactures amounted to 421 millions, a total of $846 millions in nine months, or an average of $4 million dollars per month, or more than 3 million dollars per day for the manufacturing interests alone. Should the imports of manufacturers' materials and the exports of manufactures continue at approximately similar rates during the remainder of the year the total of manufacturers' materials imported and of manufactures exported would considerably exceed one billion dollars.

Manufacturers' materials now form practically one-half of the total imports of the United States, or, to be more exact, 48.4 per cent; and manufactured articles form practically 40 per cent of the total domestic exports, or, to be more accurate, 39.26 per cent. In 1890 manufacturers' materials formed 33 per cent of the total imports and manufacturers formed but 20 per cent of the total domestic exports. Manufacturers' materials imported in the nine months ending with September, 1905, were practically twice as great in value as in the corresponding months of 1890; while manufactures exported in the nine months ending with September, 1905, were practically four times as great as in the corresponding months of 1890, the figures for the nine months periods of the years named being, for manufacturers' materials imported in 1890, 208 million dollars, and in 1905, 422 millions; and of manufactures exported in 1890, 113 million dollars, and in 1905, 424 millions. Thus the exportation of the manufactured articles has grown much more rapidly than the importation of manufacturers' materials, suggesting that the exporters of the country are drawing, year by year, a relatively larger proportion of their raw materials from our own country.

The fact, however, that manufacturers' materials now form a larger proportion of the total imports than in earlier years suggests that the growing requirements of the people of the United States in other lines are now being more fully met through home industries than ever before, while an analysis of the imports now brought into the country shows that a growing share of these increasing imports is of articles requiring for their production climatic conditions not existing in the United States. Of tropical and subtropical products alone the quantity brought into the United States from abroad (including that supplied by its noncontiguous territory) amounted in the fiscal year 1905 to over 500 million dollars, against less than 300 millions in 1890, and 140 millions in 1870, and much of this is manufacturers' materials, such as Indian rubber, raw silk, hemp, jute tobacco, cabinet woods, chemicals, etc. Other classes of manufacturers' materials of which the United States does not supply sufficient for its own requirements are tin, hides, wool, and many less important articles, while considerable quantities of copper (of which the United States is the world's largest producer) are shipped from the adjacent countries of Mexico and Canada into the United States, where facilities for smelting and marketing justify this movement of copper into the greatest copper-producing country of the world—the United States.

Manufacturers' materials imported in the month of September, 1905, aggregated 47 million dollars, against 34 millions in September, 1890; while manufacturers exported in September 1905, amounted to 43 million dollars, as against 14 millions in the corresponding month of 1890. In the nine months' periods of the years named manufacturers' materials imported amounted to 422 million dollars this year to date, as against 208 millions in 1890; while manufacturers exported amounted to 424 millions in 1905, as against 113 millions in 1890.

PRESS COMMENT.
Dragged In By a Teuton.
Chicago Record-Herald: It remained for a Teuton to drag the great Slav nation forward into the twentieth century.

Just As if Necessary.

Ought To, But Won't.
Evening Wisconsin: The tragedy at Kenyon college ought to put an end to all kinds of hazing, and to fraternity initiations which subject the neophytes to suffering or danger.

Would Be Worth The Price.
Milwaukee Sentinel: If the next interview between Governor La Follette and Chairman Connor could be held in a theatre the box receipts would pay all the expenses of advertising the show.

Humiliating But Necessary.
La Crosse Leader-Press: The czar has just signed another treaty of capitulation. The issue of the manifesto abolishing absolutism was no doubt as humiliating to him as the signature of the treaty of Portsmouth, and was vastly more important to Russia and the world in general.

Storm Settles A Dispute.
Exchange: It seems probable that the big storm will settle the long dispute over riparian rights in Squatter Town, Marinette, a forty-acre tract of made land on which 200 fishermen families have lived for twenty years. The storm carried away the Marinette Lumber breakwater pier and four feet of water now covers the tract.

Labor-Saving Eulogies.
Boston Globe: The acting public printer, discussing the waste in publishing, declares that he has discovered that the costly volumes containing eulogies of departed senators and representatives are largely utilized by country clergymen, who use them in many phrases which they store in memory for use in funerals. This is a compliment to the congressional memorial orators that doubtless they will appreciate as it deserves.

Good Habits of Hearst.
Madison Journal: Candidate Hearst's own newspaper has this personal information about him for voters: "Mr. Hearst is now in his 43d year, is a tall, broad-shouldered, vigorous man, whose works and achievements are an index to his energy. He has been married two and a half years, and has one child, a son. He uses neither tobacco nor alcoholic liquors, and though a master of the automobile, has never taken part in any speed contest, and has done all he could to discourage that phase of automobilism."

Why He Opposes Coeducation.
Hartford, Conn. Times: An objection to coeducational colleges which has not been much heard of in public is stated by a professor in one of them. He has taught there a dozen years and at first was a strong advocate of the system. Now he says he would like to see women banished from the university or would like to receive a call to a man's university. And the reason he gives is what he calls the American woman's passion for turning everything into a social affair. The professor describes in detail the social functions of the women's side of the college, the development of the taste for formal society, the dress parade, as he regards it, and closes with the declaration that the few who can take high rank as students will before long go abroad, where women students really apply themselves to study and do not think about society at the same time.

Shaw's Fling at Irving.
Chicago Chronicle: It will be hard for some people to decide whether George Bernard Shaw is malignant or only plain foolish. In his sneering assault on Irving's reputation and the proprietary of giving him a memorial place in Westminster abbey he is not unlike a spiteful fellow, who, meeting in the road the funeral of a man whose greater fame in life he has envied, instead of lifting his hat or even passing without sign on his way stands by the roadside reviling the solemn ceremony and flinging mud on the coffin.

Shaw makes it plain that in his judgment Irving was not sufficiently eminent in his profession to be accorded the honor of a place in the abbey. It is not easy to tell from this by what standard of fame Mr. Shaw measures his judgment. For himself, he is witty, capable of strong thought often erratic thinking, but apparently consumed with an overmastering vanity. He was born with a lack of respect for anything that other men respect, in all appearance at least. He lacks respect in an especial manner for the accepted canons of decency in literary themes and treatment, and at the time when he paused to revile the fame of Irving he was resenting the condemnation on that score by his countrymen of his latest play—a play which seems on the high road to the same adverse fate in this country.

Humphrey Auction
Wednesday occurred the auction sale on the J. B. Humphrey farm, situated one mile southeast of Atton, and was an object of great interest to residents of that locality. A good-sized crowd was present and everything sold well. Mr. Humphrey, having owned this farm for a number of years, had accumulated considerable stock and machinery, this being evidenced by the fact that it required the services of two auctioneers, namely: Col. Wm. T. Dooley of this city and Dan Finnane of Evansville. Residents of Atton and vicinity are sorry to lose their old friend and neighbor, who is closely identified with the interests of that village, both socially and politically. But Mr. Humphrey has rented his farm and will move immediately to Janesville, where he is associated with the Lowell Realty company, being one of the partners.

Mrs. Mary Karl has been making an extended visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Searcliff, in Indian Ford.

DELIGHTED WITH ART EXHIBITION
THROUGH OF VISITORS AT ELDERD HALL WELL PLEASED
ON THE OPENING NIGHT
Modern Dutch School Is Represented by Many Notable Paintings—Music and Lecture by J. S. Thurber.

Last evening the fourth semi-annual exhibition of paintings from the galleries of W. Scott Thurber, Chicago, was opened at Elderd hall, the public library, under the auspices of the Janesville Art League. While some of the old favorites, such as Svend Svendsen, painter of winter scenes with high lights and weird suggestiveness, Charles Sprague Pearce whose "Pea Pickers" excited admiration a year ago; Walter McEwen; Francis Jeannot whose scene from the Forest of Fontainebleau has advanced in value $100 since its purchase by the Art League, and others are not represented, there are numerous canvases from familiar brushes and a number of artists new to the Janesville exhibitions, make their bow. Josef Israels, regarded by many as the greatest artist of the century and still at work at his easel at 82 years of age, is one of these and Everett Pieters, a younger artist of the Dutch school, another. The latter is represented by two remarkable canvases. A. A. Lesrel whose "A Quiet Nip" is remembered has a much more pretentious offering in the "Return of the Conqueror." B. J. Blommers, whose water color "Children of the Sea" made such a favorable impression last spring, has a large and beautiful oil called "The New Arrival." This latter painting, valued at $2,500, D. A. C. Art, one of the most prominent of the younger Dutch painters, is a newcomer, with "The Gooseherd," Bruce Crane, with "Winter Sunset," and William McGrath, with "The Vintage Dance." The exhibition is by far the most pretentious that has been seen here and justly deserved the largest attendance at an opening night in the two years' series of exhibitions.

"The Bashful Suitor"
Kneff & Hatch's orchestra played during the evening and the visitors were formally received by a committee consisting of Mesdames F. A. Capelle, E. F. Woods, Charles Tarrant, A. C. Hough, R. R. Powell, E. D. McGowan, James Mills and Miss Ellen F. Goodman.

Seymour J. Thurber, who is in charge of the exhibition, gave a very interesting talk on pictures in general and how they should be studied as well as the ones which he has brought to the city this fall, and their creators. Interest during the early part of the evening very naturally centered on the Israeli paintings, as the author, through his famous works "The World," "The Fair," and "The Frugal Meal," gives us the Vanderbilts, is well known even to those who take but a casual interest in art matters. In "The Bashful Suitor" are presented, with the sun flickering through the leaves of a wood, the figures of a peasant boy and girl of Netherlands moving slowly along a quiet pathway. The boy has something to say and is twiddling his fingers behind his back and steadfastly not saying it, while the girl anticipating the message has folded her arms in a quaint, awkward little pose, which makes the charming and familiar comedy complete. On close inspection the figures appear to be vague in outline and the paint put on in clots. The picture was painted twenty-five years ago and is valued at $4,200.

Examples Of Dutch School
The Dutch school of art is the strongest of the modern schools and is the most largely represented among the important pictures of this collection. Blommers "The New Arrival," disclosing two peasant women looking upon the specimen of the newborn child which a third carries in her arms; Pieters' marine "The Shell Fishers" and his genre painting of "The Uninvited Guests," excited much admiration. Wonderful in detail and coloring as well as the complex story of contrasting emotions and mental attitudes it reveals, is "Return of the Conqueror." The tapestry, the mahogany woodwork, the velvet table cover, the minute gold lace ornaments on the rich garb of the dignitaries, the mother of pearl ornament on the table, are so finely wrought that one can scarcely believe they are only paint. As one turns from the fine garb of the conqueror to the coarse face he can almost hear the hoarse cry of triumph to which he is giving utterance to the mingled tolerance, contempt, and disgust of his auditors and the retainers who follow him.

Many Beautiful Water-Colors
Besides the paintings mentioned there are works by Westerbeek, De Quiviers, and a number of others and an array of beautiful aquarelles. Alice Daniels, the young woman who recently obtained recognition, is represented by half a score. With the color engravings, etchings, and carbon, there are all told 140 pictures.

HENRY S. BICKNELL WEDDED TO MISS GRACE PATTERSON
Well-Known Business Man and Popular Young Lady Married at Rockford Tuesday.
Henry S. Bicknell and Miss Grace Patterson of this city were married in Rockford Tuesday, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Sheldon. Returning to Janesville the couple departed for Milwaukee on their honeymoon trip. They will be at home at 101 Locust street after Nov. 10. The groom is one of Janesville's leading business men and is interested in the Bicknell Hardware Co. The bride is a very popular young lady, who has been employed as bookkeeper at the Bicknell establishment.

W. Campbell of Hanover was in the city yesterday.
Mrs. Logerman and son, Curtis, and Mrs. Ohlweiller visited in Hancock Tuesday.

FUNERAL OF LATE JAMES SUTHERLAND
Remains of Leading Citizen Laid at Rest in Oak Hill Cemetery This Afternoon.

Scores of pioneer residents and leading citizens paid their last respects to the late James Sutherland this afternoon, funeral services over the remains being held from the home on Highland avenue at half-past two o'clock. Rev. R. C. Denison, who officiated, paid a glowing tribute to that Christian gentleman, who had enjoyed the distinction of being the oldest book-seller in the United States, the oldest active merchant in the city of Janesville, her first superintendent of schools, her mayor, Rock county's state senator and the father of the Wisconsin normal school system, which is generally conceded to be far superior to any other in the Union. The pallbearers were Josiah T. Wright, A. A. Jackson, S. B. Lewis, John M. Whitehead, H. C. Buell and S. Clark Burnham. Interment was in Oak Hill cemetery.

HAROLD MYERS OUT FOR CROSS-COUNTRY TEAM
Wisconsin track athletes, to the number of thirty-five, have commenced training for the intercollegiate cross-country run at Chicago on Thanksgiving day. Captain Lightbody of Chicago, president of the Cross Country Running association, has received assurances of teams for this year's meet from Illinois, Wisconsin and Nebraska. C. S. Hean is captain of the badgers and among the runners mentioned as his most probable teammates is Harold Myers of this city.

THE STARS BY DAYLIGHT.
Tradition That They May Be Seen From Bottom of Shaft.

Are the stars visible to ordinary sight in the daytime? There is a widespread tradition that they are; that if an observer places himself at the bottom of any deep shaft—as of a mine, a well or a factory chimney—which may shut off scattered light and reduce the area of sky illumination acting on the retina, he will be able to discern the brighter stars without difficulty. The tradition is one of a respectable antiquity, for Aristotle refers to persons seeing stars in daylight when looking out from caverns of subterranean reservoirs, and Pliny ascribes to deep wells a similar power of rendering visible the stars, the light of which would otherwise be lost in the overpowering splendor of the solar rays.

The tradition, well founded or not, has often been adopted for literary effect. It seems almost sacrilegious to hint that no star known to astronomers could have shone down unceasingly upon poor Stephen Blackpool during his seven days and nights of agony at the bottom of the Old Hell shaft; that at the best he could only have caught a glimpse of it for a few minutes in each twenty-four hours as it passed across the zenith. Dickens, indeed, does not absolutely say that Stephen watched the star by daylight. It is only a natural inference from his description, but Kipling adopts the tradition in its extremest form when he writes of—

The gorge that shows the stars at noon-day clear.

But is the tradition true? Of course every one knows that Venus from time to time may be seen even at high noon, but then Venus at her brightest is many times over brighter than Sirius. Then, again, the assistance of a telescope enables the brighter stars to be discerned at midday, but the telescope not only directs the eye and greatly limits the area from which the starlight reaches the observer, but it enormously increases the brightness of the star relative to that sky illumination. The naked eye observation of true stars in full sunlight stands in quite a different category.

Humboldt, who was much interested in the question, repeatedly tried the experiment, both in Siberia and in America, and not only failed himself ever to detect a star, but never came across any one who had succeeded. Much more recently an American astronomer set up a tube for the express purpose of seeing the Pleiades by daylight, also with no effect. It has been supposed that Flamsteed, the first astronomer royal, sank a well at Greenwich observatory for the purpose of observing Gamma Draconis, the zenith star of Greenwich, in this manner.

The existence of the well is undoubted, though Sir George Airy, the late astronomer royal, was unable to find it, but Flamsteed marks it on more than one of his plans of the observatory, and there is a drawing extant of the well itself, showing the spiral staircase that ran down it. But its purpose seems to have been not to have furnished the means of observing the star with the naked eye, but to enable the observer to measure, as accurately as possible, the distance of the star from the true zenith at the moment of transit.

Sir John Herschel mentions a case, which he considers as satisfactory evidence, of an optician who stated that the earliest circumstance that drew his attention to astronomy "was the regular appearance at a certain hour for several successive days of a considerable star through the shaft of a chimney." This, it will be noticed, is second hand evidence. I have never been able to obtain evidence even so direct as this myself, though I have met several persons who felt quite confident that they had seen stars by daylight on looking up the shaft of a mine, or that "some one had told them he had done so."—Knowledge.

HOPE TO EXERT

LOCAL POLICY-HOLDERS DO NOT EXPECT OFFICE.

CONFIDENT OF STABILITY

Of Insurance Companies, But Desirous of Preventing Future Scandal, Extravagance and Waste.

Representatives of thirteen mutual life insurance companies—the Mutual, the Equitable, the New York Life, the Penn Mutual, the Massachusetts Mutual, the Northwestern Mutual, the Mutual Benefit of New Jersey, the National Life of Vermont, the Home, the Michigan Mutual, the National Life of Washington, the Aetna, and the Wisconsin Mutual—were assembled at the city hall last evening at the call of policy-holders in the first named of these companies to discuss plans of such an organization as would enable them to exert some influence to secure better management. Frank H. Jackson, acting as chairman of the meeting, and stated in opening the session that it had been called to secure suggestions on ways and means and methods.

Election Cut and Dried
Senator Whitehead said that he had insurance in several old line companies, some of which he knew nothing at all about; not even when the annual meetings occurred. Not long ago he had attended the annual meeting of the Northwestern Mutual at Milwaukee. He went there thinking that he would have an opportunity to find out something about the business management. When asked where the meeting was he was shown to rooms where the election was in progress. There were printed ballots which the voters were expected to deposit in the boxes and go their way. These methods were probably alright but they were not the kind stockholders who attended the annual meetings of other business corporations, were familiar with. After this experience he had been led to reflect considerably on how much he was depending on the policies he held, policies which were guaranteed by companies he knew almost nothing about. In the legislature there was a committee on insurance to which all legislation affecting these companies was referred. Others let this committee alone. Nobody asked questions or made any investigations. He had read that Wisconsin was one of the states the insurance companies were watching. In the reports of the investigations in New York it was disclosed that Mr. Fricke received $5,000 for his services at Madison at the last session. While there this man was ostensibly arrayed against the companies by whom it now appears he was employed.

Purposes of Organization
About all the average man knows about the company with which he takes a policy is what the local agent who called and solicited his business told him. The fraternal companies have a great advantage in this regard. The local lodge is a compact order; meetings are held at regular times; there are rules and regulations to be followed; the organization reaches from the policy-holder to the head of the management and the former is kept in touch with what the latter is doing; and there are frequent changes of officers. It seemed to the speaker that policy-holders in mutual companies haven't much to complain of if the management wasn't just what they would like to have it, but we are taught to expect that ordinary decency and the restraints of citizenship will govern men occupying such conspicuous positions as to the life insurance officers. That these men would tolerate and even have a part in the discreditable transactions that have been revealed led us to ask if we should tolerate them and the methods now in vogue and to question whether or not it is safe to keep on with our investments. With reference to this latter phase of the matter, however, nothing in the investigations had shown that the companies were shaky; everything had pointed to their solvency. An organization such as that contemplated in Janesville should have a twofold purpose: (1) to protect friends and neighbors whose range of vision might not be as large as those who had interested themselves in the movement and exert an influence to prevent them from losing what they had invested by relinquishing their policies; and (2) to find some method of exerting a moral influence at least on the management of the companies themselves.

No Hope of Official Influence
Obviously it was impracticable to hope to have any more than a moral influence from this distance. The directors of the companies must direct. If anyone had an idea that the local men who had taken hold of the matter were looking to official influence, couldn't have pondered very deeply on the problem. But if four or five thousand men had means of getting together and acting in unison, they might become a source of strength to honest management and restraint to dishonest management. Any one person organization would be assuming a great burden. But a movement might be started which would eventually take in the state. It could scarcely be hoped that all the policy-holders could be enlisted, because many of the smaller ones would not be able to pay the cost.

Do Not Wish to Harass
With regard to the useful influence which such an organization might exert, the speaker apprehended that some rash proposition of legislation might come up at any time. It seemed to him it was not the policy of stockholders to harass and annoy the companies which they own. If there was to be any legislation it should be remedial, not radical. Just what was needed he was not in a position to say. It would require much study. Within his hearing were men who would be able to be of great value to four or five thousand policy-holders and the state legislature, if they could be induced to give the matter their attention. If there was a possibility of a rational organization tion which could make its influence felt, he believed it should be undertaken.

Federal Supervision
Chairman Jackson broached the question of federal supervision, stating that it might be well to inquire if policy-holders were in favor of having congress assume control of these corporations and to question lawyers with regard to the powers of congress in this direction. A. A. Jackson said that he would favor federal supervision, if such a thing were possible, but he did not believe that the framers of the constitution contemplated such a purely contractual relation as life insurance in making their provisions for the regulation of commerce. George Sutherland did not believe that the United States would supervise this matter any better than the state, or the state any better than the city, or the city any better than the individual. He had been fooled twice on fire insurance companies, certified by the state insurance commissioner in both instances, and one of which was insolvent at the time it was given a certificate of good character. The U. S. government conducted its business no better than a private individual and frequently not as well. The Chicago postoffice building was an example. Bitter complaints had been made recently against the business methods of the National Bank of Illinois and the speaker had written to the comptroller but was unable to get the courtesy of a reply. He believed that an organization of the old line policy-holders if enough of them could be gotten into it, might accomplish something by sending a man to all the annual meetings of the companies for the purpose of getting definite information as to the conduct of the business. J. J. Cunningham described the organization within an organization plan adopted and successfully carried out by a fraternal and insurance society to which he belonged. There had been much rivalry for the offices despite the fact that only the secretary and treasurer was paid a salary and the whole state had been quickly organized for much the same purposes as those contemplated in the case of the mutual companies.

Insurance Man Favors It
E. C. Bailey, insurance agent, expressed himself as heartily in favor of any movement such as contemplated. Wise legislation was needed but the companies could hardly be blamed for spending money, considering the kind of legislation they had had to fight. He admitted that there were some dishonest men in the life insurance business, but said that recent developments had shown that there were rascals in the banking business and other kinds of business as well. Life insurance today was a better proposition than ever before. Any man who reasoned could see that the companies were stronger, now that irregularities were exposed, than they had been before the undermining work had been suddenly checked.

Resolutions Adopted
A set of resolutions introduced by Senator Whitehead and passed declared the confidence of local men interested in the solvency of the big companies and their ability to pay policies as they mature, but condemn waste and extravagance of management and demand resignations of recreant officers. Criminal and civil prosecution to punish and recover money illegitimately used, publicity in the conduct of business, and more thorough public control are demanded and policy-holders are urged to organize for the protection of their interests. The plans, so far as formulated, appear to look to the ultimate organization of the policy-holders throughout the state into a corporation without capital whose business will be transacted by a board of directors, the same as any other body of the kind. F. H. Jackson was authorized to appoint a committee of three, with himself as chairman, to report a definite plan of procedure at a mass-meeting to be called in the near future.

A PRETTY WEDDING
IN THE SECOND WARD

Miss Genevieve Tenquest Married to Mr. Watson Ayers Last Evening.
A very pleasant wedding occurred at No. 3 Fifth avenue, this city, last evening, the occasion being the marriage of Mr. Watson W. Ayers and Miss Genevieve Tenquest. Rev. George W. Burdick of Welton, Iowa, a former pastor of the bride, was the officiating clergyman. Miss Maud Thirby of Milton Junction acted as bridesmaid and Mr. Ray Ayers, a brother of the groom, as best man. After the ceremony an elegant wedding feast was served to the guests. Only the immediate relatives of the groom and a few special friends of the bride were invited. During the evening the newly married couple were given a serenade, which while rather discordant, was still very orderly, the participants being the matron and lady attendants of the county farm, with whom the bride has been associated for more than a year. Upon the opening of the door the usual shower of rice was administered. The serenaders were cordially welcomed by the bride and groom and welcomed to the new home, which had been previously furnished as their future residence, and where the wedding ceremony was performed. Mr. and Mrs. Ayers are highly respected and beloved by all within the circle of their acquaintance and have the best wishes of all for their future happiness and prosperity.

ROCK COUNTY IS UP ON THE LIST

STANDS FOURTH IN THE STATE IN POPULATION.

RELATIVE POSITIONS GIVEN

Population of Some of the Leading Cities Are Made Public by the Secretary of State.

The total population of the state of Wisconsin is 2,228,949, as shown by the completed official compilation of the census announced yesterday by Secretary of State Houser. The total gain over 1900 is 159,997. In 1900 the total population was 2,068,952. The rate of growth of the population of the state for the last five years is 7.7 per cent. The rate of increase in the five years between 1895 and 1900 was 22.7 per cent. In 52 of the 71 counties of the state gains were reported, aggregating 166,127. In 19 counties there were losses aggregating 6,220, the resultant net gain of the state being 159,997.

The First Eight
Rock county holds its old position as fourth county on the list, with 58,641 credited up against it. Milwaukee leads the whole state with 363,721. The following is a list of the eight counties above fifty thousand:

County	Population	Gain
Milwaukee	363,721	23,704

MISS MARGARET D. RYAN

WEDS DWIGHT VAN AIKEN

Ceremony Was Performed by Rev. Fr. Collins at Fond du Lac Yesterday.

Miss Margaret D. Ryan, daughter of the late Dennis Ryan and a charming young woman whose friends in Janesville are legion, was wedded in Fond du Lac at 10:30 yesterday morning to Dwight Van Aiken. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Collins. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Frances E. Ryan of this city, and Arthur J. Ryan of Sterling, Ill., acted as best man. Immediately after the wedding breakfast the young couple departed for Chicago, where they are to make their future home.

REAL HAVANA FOR FIVE CENTS.

Smith Drug Co. at Last Find a Nickel Cigar Worth Smoking.

When Smith Drug Co., who probably have the largest sale for high grade cigars of any dealer in Janesville, heard that a long Havana filler cigar was being retailed for 5c, they were naturally incredulous. As they wanted to give their customers the best cigars for the least money they got a sample box of the Wadsworth Bros' Chicos.

The samples were all right and they ordered a trial 1,000 to see how they would please their trade. The result was wonderful, as men who had been buying ten and fifteen cent cigars said they preferred the Chicos. It is a good and satisfactory smoke with a clear Havana aroma.

Try a Chico today and you will enjoy it, if you like a good cigar.

SOME TRIMMING EFFECTS IN THE NEWER LACES

There are all sorts of dainty effects in laces, and everything in fabric, from the finest and sheerest of tulle up to and including a heavy manish tweed, has its complement of trimming lace. Indeed, it is not at all uncommon to see French costumes of the latter class of material trimmed with a coarse and heavy lace of Arabie or Cluny design. Those illustrated evidence the vogue of embroidered effects in conjunction with lace weaves. The poppy spray shows a favorite lace device reproduced to excellent effect in embroidery. The next piece shows lace and linen embroidery mingled, and the broad edge and double-edged banding have a point de gene foundation on which little embroidered linen sprays are wrought. The remaining design shows the continued popularity of separable effects, a lace and an embroidered motif alternating in the length of the piece.

FASHION NOTES

NOVELTIES IN DRESSY TOILETTES

It is more repetition to speak of the beauty of the new modes and their surprises, but one finds new cause for rejoicing at each thought of the privilege of wearing the creations set forth by the great modistes.

The fashionable tendency is towards embroidered broadcloths for ultra-dressy toilettes. There are those who for the sake of economy as well as personal taste cling to lace appliques and insertions, and these, too are as smart as ever, but the elegance of the embroidered cloth gown cannot be exaggerated. This is the time of the year when one sees such costumes in abundance in Paris for the weather permits one wearing them with all kinds of smart bonnet and shoulder trimmings that add attractiveness to the toilette, without concealing its beauties. Striking handsome is a model of delicate, chic broadcloth richly embroidered in silver flowers. Following the prevailing craze the gown is made in princess, with a narrow giraffe encircling the waist. The entire front of the gown is left princess and embroidered from top to bottom with silver flowers. It has a transparent yoke of rosy blue and orchid tinted chiffon.

With these embroidered are worn very pretty hats in soft white felt and velvet trimmed in folds of silver gauze and in wings of white and silver. They are small and fit the head closely affording a full view of the elaborate coiffures which are effected by French women.

The spangled robe is shown at its best this year and a creation in dark blue exhibited on the rue de la Paix attracted much attention. The robe was spangled with small blue iridescent discs, with glints of gold beaming here and there, put on in a running up-and-down design. Above the hem of the skirt, which is built over blue taffeta, there is a border of the spangles applied in Roman key design and outlined with narrow rickings of chiffon.

The bodice was a rather simple affair, having a V-cut back and front

Take Care Of Your Heart.

It is the engine that forces the blood to every part of the body; this blood conveys the nourishment that makes flesh, bone and muscle; it also carries off the worn-out particles. If the heart flutters or palpitates, it is weak, and is working imperfectly, so that the body does not get this nourishment; it also fails to throw off the impurities, and they remain to poison the system. If it is irregular, skips beats, or is painful, the heart is probably "leaky" and the circulation poor. These conditions are dangerous. You can make your heart well, and keep it so, with Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, which is a heart medicine and tonic that strengthens the heart nerves and muscles.

"I have been a sufferer for years from nervousness and weak heart, and I have tried all the doctors in the community. They all told me that I had heart trouble, but they failed to help me. My doctor prescribed upon me to try Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, and I did so. The first bottle did not benefit me, but the second bottle did. Every dose helped me from the time I began taking it, and after awhile my trouble was gone entirely."

FOOTBALL EXPENSES.

How It Costs a Fortune to Keep a Great Team.

LAVISH OUTLAYS BY BIG COLLEGES

Father and Breadwinner of the Athletic Family is Most Expensive of All Sports—Games, Bring in Thousands in Receipts, but Victorious Eleven Comes High.

Few people have any idea of the enormous expense entailed in putting a college football eleven on the field and maintaining it, says the New York World. Those who base their estimates on seeing the immense crowds of 30,000 and more pouring into the great fields to see the big games imagine the season yields a huge profit. When Yale plays Princeton or Harvard, the crimson meets Pennsylvania, and Michigan struggles with Chicago, most of the spectators probably wonder what becomes of the immense financial returns; for, as a rule, a price as high is charged for football seats as it costs to go to the best of the theaters.

Considering that players give their services, it would seem a reasonable theory that after all expenses are paid there should still be an enormous profit. It might be but for the surprising outlay. Football does yield a profit at all the big colleges, but nothing like what would be imagined. It is the money maker of the athletic family, but costs the most to keep. It supports itself, rowing, hockey, lacrosse, swimming and indoor athletics and lets baseball work for itself.

All the children of the backbone of college sport are expensive and eat a large portion of father football's income, especially his Nauticm daughters, the Misses Crew, but the old man himself is the most extravagant. The outlay has begun, and the next few weeks will see money lavished on the greatest of college games in a manner to stagger the credulity of those who have not examined into the figures and do not realize what the sport costs annually.

At Yale last year it cost $27,000 to pay the running expenses, such as hotel bills, railroad fare, training table and football equipment, and when to this is added the salaries of the coaches and cost of improvements to the athletic plant it is probable that the gridiron bill was as much as President Roosevelt receives for his year's salary. And Yale is only one of a dozen big colleges where money is poured out like water. No team can have a winner without this outlay. The three big winners last year were Yale, Pennsylvania and Michigan.

This year, in addition to having the usual high priced coaching system, with Byron Dickson in charge, the Quakers have the services of the highest priced trainer in the business, Mike Murphy, formerly of Yale, who is admittedly the greatest developer of athletic talent the United States has ever seen. Murphy is to look after the baseball and track team as well as the gridiron stars. For this he will get $5,000 a year, and for signing the contracts that took him from Yale to Penn he was made a present of a house.

Most of Michigan's certainly does not make less than $5,000 yearly out of football. Harvard has been equally lavish in the matter of outlay, and this year, in the hope of having her football fortunes retrieved, is paying the biggest salary ever given to a coach, $7,000. This will go to Bill Reid, captain of the crimson team that beat Yale. Considering he will only work three months, it is pay at the rate of $23,000 a year—more than any professor in the college or even its president gets.

Harvard and Pennsylvania alike have been under extraordinary expenses during the last two years for the establishment of their athletic fields. The stadium at Cambridge and the structures at Franklin Field, Philadelphia are conceded the finest of their kind in existence, and each cost in the neighborhood of half a million dollars.

In examining into the things for which money is expended the list furnished by Yale last year is fairly typical. This shows that railroad fare for the season cost $9,330; hotels and meals, $5,300; merchandise and sporting goods, $3,735; shoes and repairs, $1,065; training table, $1,581; printing and stationery, $935; stenography, typewriting and clerical services, $1,025; carriages, $790; coach's expenses, $940; freight, express and cartage, $455; press clippings, $255; rail-boys, $575; doctors and medicines, $150; referees, timekeepers, etc., $485; labor and material at field, $3,580; trophies, $120; and legal advice, $363; a total of $25,550.

It is more than likely that the current season will see a big increase in the above amounts. Princeton and Harvard are especially likely to plunge in for big sums. These colleges are anxious to make up for their defeat at the hands and feet of Yale and are prepared to spend money right and left in order to make success possible.

The sums mentioned above are those spent by the larger colleges. In proportion the smaller ones are equally lavish. It took an offer of $4,000 a year to take Coach Glenn Warner from Carleton to Ithaca; and Coaches Newton and Bull, who look after the football fortunes of Lafayette and Lehigh, get in the neighborhood of $3,000 each. Chicago is very liberal to Coach Stagg.

But there seems to be no check to "frenzied football," for as long as the pigskin knights do battle the cost of war must be borne.

Danderine
GREW MISS LEWIS' HAIR AND WE CAN
PROVE IT

The Great Danderine Never Fails to Produce the Desired Results

MISS Lewis' hair was very thin and it was less than two feet in length when she began using Danderine. She says her hair and scalp are now fairly teeming with new life and vigor. That's the main secret of this great remedy's success as a hair grower. It enlivens, invigorates and fairly electrifies the hair glands and tissues of the scalp, causing unusual and unheard-of activity on the part of these two most important organs, resulting in a strenuous and continuous growth of the hair.

The following is a reproduction of Miss Lewis' last letter:

January 3, 1905.

Dear Doctor Knowlton:

You know I told you in my first letter that my hair would not reach below my shoulders, and that all of it together only made one tiny braid.

I am sending you my photograph, which I had taken at Stevens Bros. It tells the whole story better than I can tell it.

Everybody I know is using Danderine, so you see I am doing something to show my appreciation.

Sincerely yours, (Miss) EVA LEWIS.

Danderine makes the scalp healthy and fertile and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp fertilizer and therefore the greatest hair-producing remedy the world has ever known. It is a natural food and a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a 25c bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. It shows results from the very start.

FREE. To show how quickly Danderine acts we will send a large sample free by return mail to any one who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and 10 cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

EMPHATIC TALK

The Kind That Carries Conviction to Every Jamesville Reader.

Conviction must follow such emphatic proof as is given here. The testimony of Jamesville residents should satisfy the most skeptical. Here is a Jamesville case. Read it and see if doubt can exist in the face of this evidence.

Mr. E. T. Fish, of 355 Ravine street, proprietor of the Fish Dray Line says: "When I was twenty years of age, I fell injuring my back, and ever since that I was troubled more or less with a dull, aching pain across the loins. It never laid me up but it was often painful and annoying. Of late years I have gone to a physician every six months and had myself thoroughly examined under the impression that there might be something wrong with my kidneys. The diagnosis always resulting in the physician claiming these organs were sound, but as the pains existed when I happened to notice in our Jamesville papers that Doan's Kidney Pills were guaranteed to cure just such troubles I procured a box at the People's Drug store and took them. Doan's Kidney Pills are a good preparation. My back has not ached since I used them. I have heard others speak very complimentary of them and I did not know their merit and required such a medicine I would consider it a favor if some one suggested their use to me. For this reason I endorse them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no other.

Derbyshire Epitaph.

More courteous in its wording than most epitaphs is one in a Derbyshire churchyard which, after giving particulars of birth and death, concludes: "Twas said he was an honest man."

OFFICIAL TRAIN IS DERAILED

Special Carrying Manager Goodnow of Alton Road Goes into Ditch.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 2.—The special train carrying General Manager Goodnow of the Chicago & Alton road on a tour of inspection was wrecked near Womach, a small station five miles east of Carlinville. No one was injured. The engine turned over in the ditch and the two special cars left the track. An open derail is said to have been the cause of the accident.

WEALTHY MAN IS TORTURED

Coroner Believes Victim Was Robbed and Burned to Death.

Allentown, Pa., Nov. 2.—After investigating the case of a man burned in his house in Lynport, twenty miles from here, Coroner Scheier returned with the statement that the victim was undoubtedly tortured and robbed and the house set on fire. The victim was Samuel J. Everett, 77 years old. He leaves an estate, mostly in property in this city, valued at upward of $100,000.

Assistant to John Long.

Washington, Nov. 2.—T. H. Newberry of Detroit, Mich., took the oath of office as assistant secretary of the navy and assumed the duties of his office.

Judith of the Plains

—By—
MARIE MANNING,
Author of "Lord Allingham, Bankrupt"

Copyright, 1905, by Harper & Brothers

However, it was plainly his duty to prevent an unprotected rendezvous with Lorimer, to reason, to plead, and, if he should fail to bring her to a reasonable frame of mind, to go with her, come what would of the result. There were reasons innumerable why he, a gentleman, should avoid the appearance of dealing with the sheep faction, he reflected grimly. Lorimer owned sheep, many thousands head. His herds had been allowed to graze unmolested, while smaller owners, like Jim Rodney, had been crowded out because his influence, politically, was a thing to be reckoned with, so Peter followed Judith, pleading Judith's cause. She did not understand, he told her, what she was doing, and, while perhaps there was not another man in the country who would not honor her unselfishness in coming to him, Lorimer's civility was not a thing to be reckoned with, drunkenness that he was, and Judith, worn with the struggle, tried beyond measure, made reckless by the daily infusion of ill fortune, pulled up the mare and laughed unpleasantly.

"You think I'm going to see Lorimer about Jim? I'm going with him to a merry-making. We're old pals, Lorimer and I."

"Judith, dear, has it come to this—that you not only distrust an old friend, but that you try to degrade yourself to hide from him the fact that you are going to your brother's? You've never spoken to Lorimer. I heard him say, not a week ago, that he had never succeeded in making you recognize him. You deceived me at first when you spoke of meeting him—I thought you had a message from him—but this talk of merry-making is beneath you. He shrugged his shoulders in disgust. He felt the torrent of grief that rent her. No sob escaped her lips. There was no convulsive movement of shoulder. She rode beside him, still as the desert before the sand storm breaks, her soul seared with white hot iron that knows no saving grace of sob or tear.

Peter drew out his watch. "It's a quarter to 11. We'll have a hard bit of riding to reach Blind creek before midnight."

Then he knew as well as she, perhaps better, the route to Jim's hiding place. She had never been there as yet. And, if Peter knew, doubtless every cattleman in the country knew. What a fool she had been with her talk of meeting Tom Lorimer! A sense of utter defeat seemed to paralyze her energies. Physical weariness was telling on her. She had been in the saddle since a little past noon, and it was now not far from midnight. And still there was the unanswered question of Peter's errand. It was long since either had broken the silence. A delicious coolness had crept into the air with the approach of midnight. Judith, breathing deep drafts of it, reminded herself of the stoicism that was hers by birth-right.

"Peter"—her voice lost some of its old ring, but it had a deeper note—"Peter, we make strange comrades, you and I, in a stranger world. We meet on Horse Thief trail, and there is reason to suppose that our errands are inimical. You've pierced all my little pretences. You know that I am going to my brother, who is an outlaw—my brother, the rope for whose hanging is already out. And yet we have been friends these many years, and we meet in this world of desolation and weigh each other's words, and there is no trust in our hearts. Our little faith is more pitiful than the cruel errands that bring us. I take it you, too, are going to my brother's?"

"I'm going there to see that you arrive safe and sound, but I had no intention of going when I left camp. You've brought me a good twenty miles out of my way, not to mention accusing me of ulterior motives. Now aren't you penitent?" He smiled at her, boyish and irresistible. To Judith it was more reassuring than an oath. "It's like dogs fighting over a picked bone; the meat's all gone. The range is overworked; it needs a good long rest." He turned toward Judith, speaking slowly. "What you have said is true. We're friends before we're partisans of either faction. I'm on my way to a roundup. There's been an unexpected order to fill a beef contract—a thousand steers. We're going to furnish 500, the XXX 250 and the Circle Star 250. Men have been scouring the country for days rounding up stragglers. It will go hard with the rustlers after this roundup, Judith."

She felt a great wave of penitence and shame sweep over her. She had not trusted him; in her heart she had nourished hideous suspicions of him, and he was telling her, quite simply, of the plays of his own faction, trusting her, as, indeed, he might, but as she never expected to be trusted.

"Peter, do you know that sometimes I think Jim has gone quite mad with these range troubles? He's acted strangely ever since his sheep were driven over the cliff. He's not been home to Alida and the children since he has been out of jail, and you know how devoted to them he has always been! He spends all his time tracking Simpson. Alida wrote me that she expects him tonight, and I'm going there on the chance."

"It's the devil's own hole for desolation that he's come to," Peter looked about the cup shaped valley that was but a cul-de-sac in the mountains. A lone crowd of dead cottonwoods grew like sentinels close to the rocky walls. Their twisted branches, gaunt and bare, writhed upward as in dumb supplication. There was about them a something that made Judith come closer to Peter as they passed them. "Those frightful trees, how can Alida stand them?" She looked back. "Oh, I wish they were cut down!" Before them was the cabin, its ruined condition pitifully apparent even by night. It had been deserted ten years before Jim brought his family to it. Rumor said it was haunted. Grim stories were told of the death of a woman who had come there with a man and had not lived to go away with him. The roof of the adjoining stable had fallen in; the bars of the corral were missing. The house was dark but for a feeble light that glimmered in one window, the beacon that had been lighted, night after night, against Jim's coming.

"Peter"—Judith had slid from her horse and was clinging to his arm—"when it happens, Peter, you will have no part in it?"

"It won't happen, Judith, if I can help it."

She kissed his hand as it held the loose reins. "Lord, I am not worthy!" was the thought in his heart. He sat graven in the saddle. Sir Knight of the Joyous Heart though he was, the unsought kiss of trust gifted him with a self reverence that would not soon forsake him.

Judith was rapping on the door and calling to Alida not to be frightened. And presently it was opened. Peter wanted to leave Judith, now that she was safely at the end of her journey, but she would not hear of it till he had eaten.

"You would have had your comfortable supper five hours ago had you not been playing cavalier to me all over the wilderness," And Peter yielded.

Judith bustled herself about the kitchen. Her mood of racking apprehension had disappeared. Indian stoicism had again the guiding hand. She waved Peter from the fire that she was kindling as if he were a blundering incompetent. But she let him slice the bacon and grind the coffee as one lets a child help.

Alida came in, white-faced and anxious over the long absence of her husband, but, conscientiously hospitable nevertheless. Peter noticed that Judith made a gallant pretense of eating, crumbling her bread and talking the meanwhile. The pale wife, who had little to say at the best of times, was put to the test to say anything at all. But withal their intent was so genuinely hospitable that Peter himself could not speak with the pity of it. Accustomed as he was to the roughness of these frontier cabins, never had he seen a human habitation so desolate as this. The mud plaster had fallen away from between the logs, showing cross sections of the melancholy prospect.

An atmosphere of tragedy brooded over the place. Whether from its long period of emptiness or from the vaguely hinted murder of the woman who had died there or whether it took its character from the prevailing desolation the cabin in the valley was an unlovely thing. Nor did the cleanliness, the conscientious making the best of things soften the woeful aspect of the place. Rather was the appeal the more poignant to the seeing eye as the brave makeshift of the self respecting poor strikes deeper than the beggar's whine. The house was bare but for the few things that Alida could take in the wagon in which they made their flight. And all through the pinch of poverty and grinning emptiness there was visible the woman touch, the brave making the best of nothing, the pitiful preparation for the coming of the man. The curtain was drawn aside, that the lamp might shed its beam farther on the way of the traveler who came not there was but one other light in the place, a bit of candle. Alida apologized for the poor light by which they must eat, but she did not offer to take the lamp from the window.

Peter was no longer Sir Knight of the Joyous Heart as he watched the little white faced woman, who went so often to the door to look toward the road that entered the valley that she was no longer aware of what she did. He saw her wide eyes full of fear, the bow of the mouth strained taut with anxiety, her unconscious fear of him as one of the alien faction and withal her concern for his comfort. Judith's control was far greater; but, though she hid it skillfully, he knew the sorrow that consumed her.

There was a cry from the room beyond, and Judith, snatching up the candle, went in to the children. All three of them were sleeping crossways in one bed, their small, round arms and legs striking out through the land of dreams as swimmers breasting the waves. She gave a little cry of delight and appreciation and called Peter to look.

Little Jim, who had cried in some passing fear, sat up sleepily. He stretched out his small arms to Peter, whom he had never seen before. Peter took him, and again he settled to sleep.

The warm, small body, giving itself with perfect confidence, strongly affected Peter's heightened susceptibility. In the very nature of the situation he could be no friend to Jim Rodney, yet here in his arms lay Jim Rodney's son, loving, trusting him instinctively. Judith noticed that his face paled beneath its many coats of tan. He was afraid of the little sleeping boy, afraid that his unaccustomed touch might hurt him, and yet loath to part with the small burden. Judith took the boy from Peter and placed him between the two little girls on the bed.

Through the window they could see Alida's dress, glimmering like a phantom in the darkness as she strained her eyes toward the path. Peter hated to leave the women and children in this desolate place. The night was far spent. To reach the roundup in season he could at best, snatch a couple of hours' sleep and be again in the saddle while the stars still shone. His saddle and saddle blanket were enough for him. The broad canopy of heaven, the bosom of mother earth, had given him sound, dreamless sleep these many years. He bade the women good night and made his bed where the canyon gave entrance to the valley. But sleep was slow to come. Now, in that vague, uncertain world where we fall through oceans of space, and the waking is the dream, the dream the waking, Peter caught pale flashes of Kitty's gold head as she ran and ran, ever in the pursuit of something, she knew not what. And as she ran hither and thither she would turn her head and beckon to Peter, and as he followed he felt the burden of years come upon him. And then he saw Judith's eyes, still and grave. He turned and awakened. No; it was not Judith's eyes, but the stars above the mountain tops.

FALL INTO CELLAR OF FLAMES

Three Firemen Suffer Injury When Railing Breaks at Blaze.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 2.—Five firemen were injured, three seriously, in a fire which destroyed the warehouse of the J. M. Fenton Storage company, 5157-51, Kershaw avenue, West Philadelphia. The injured firemen are John Earley, William Drake and James McLaughlin. Earley is not expected to recover. The men were on the third floor, directing a stream of water down a hatchway, when the railing gave way and they fell into the cellar. The fire is supposed to have been caused by the explosion of a gasoline stove. The loss is estimated at $35,000.

Train Hits Workmen.

Buffalo, Nov. 2.—A party of workmen from Pratt & Lotchworth's foundry, in Black Rock, was run down by an engine at the Amherst street crossing of the New York Central railroad. One of them was instantly killed and three others fatally injured.

To Meet to Condemn Bill.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 2.—Operators and owners of practically every coal mine in Kentucky will meet here Nov. 13 to pass resolutions condemning the Esch-Townsend bill, which will be considered by congress at its coming session.

Population Well Divided.

There are 272 cities and towns in the United States having a population of 5,000 or more.

Reduces Dougherty's Bond.

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 2.—Judge Worthington overruled the motion of the attorneys for N. C. Dougherty to reduce his bail to $25,000. The court did reduce the bail, however, by $12,700, leaving the total at $38,300. Dougherty was unable to furnish bond.

Millionaire Youth Kills Hogs.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 2.—At $10 a week, August Horster, 22-year-old son of the late brewer, is killing hogs in a local packing plant. He has just come into the possession of more than $1,000,000, which he will invest in the packing business.

Hunting Season Now On

Prospects In the Maine Woods—Game Commissioner Carleton's Views of the Situation—Deer Plentiful, Moose on Increase—Open Period.

The hunting season is now at its height in this country and Canada.

According to Chairman Carleton of the Maine fish and game commission and the reports of guides, the prospect is for good sport in Maine this fall, deer being as plentiful as ever, moose on the increase and birds abundant.

There have been no changes in the Maine game laws other than those relating to the fees to be paid by non-residents. The open and close seasons remain the same.

The fee charged non-residents for hunting big game continues at $15. The fee to hunt birds and other game in their season prior to Oct. 1 was made $5, and a person who has paid this fee may exchange his license after Oct. 1 for the regular fifteen dollar hunting license by paying $10 additional.

The law now allows one who has a license to take home ten partridges, ten woodcock and ten ducks, provided that he shall attach to the game a coupon tag from his license. Heretofore the Maine law has not allowed a non-resident to take any birds out of the state, and the concession is appreciated by hunters from far away.

"Not since I have been a member of the game commission," says Mr. Carleton, "have partridges and ducks—particularly partridges—been nearly so plentiful as they are this year. There is also an abundance of deer, according to reports from wardens all over the hunting region, and no one should have any difficulty in getting his legal allowance of two deer this season."

"As for moose, that is another question, more difficult to answer. Moose are now found in localities where there were none a few years ago, and many contend that this is a sure sign of their increase, while others say that the game is being driven from its usual haunts by the operations of lumbermen."

"It is not easy to get a moose, although I have known the most experienced hunters to blunder upon the game and kill it without much difficulty and with little expense involved in their trip. On the other hand, old hunters often go home empty-handed."

"Hundreds of good, big moose will be killed. I have no doubt, this season. We have had the most successful fishing season on record in Maine, and, with good weather, I look for a fine hunting season."

The deer season in Maine lasts until Dec. 1 and the moose season also. The big game season in New Brunswick opened Oct. 15. Moose are reported plentiful there.

Great Roseben.

D. C. Johnson's Son of Ben Strome Season's Leading Sprinter.

The American turf may well be proud of Roseben, the fleet and sturdy son of Ben Strome and Rose Leaf, who has been retired for the season after breaking the record for six furlongs, with 140 pounds up, and winning eight out of twenty-five races, running second in five and third in two. One of the greatest thoroughbred sprinters that have ever been seen in the United States, where the greatest sprinters are developed, he may be acclaimed the champion of all as a five-year-old.

Turkmen of forty years' experience cannot remember a greater sprinter than Roseben.

Reliable, last season's star, could not compare with him, and Chaucerunda and Voter, previous champions at the same game, did nothing to entitle them to a ranking with the new record holder. Both were fair weight carriers of great speed, but Roseben is a marvel in both ways, and it is doubtful if his equal has been or ever will be seen.

There is none of the imperiousness of the average thoroughbred about Roseben despite his greatness.

In the paddock and on his way to the post he is a model of propriety, and his demeanor while waiting for a start is absolute perfection.

Starter Cassidy proclaims him the best natured and most intelligent post actor he has ever had to deal with. In that respect Roseben is like the great old race mare Imp.

"He breezed all the way," said Jockey Frank O'Neil, who rode Roseben in the record race at Belmont park, New York. "I never let him down from the start and was restraining him when we finished." O'Neil was surprised at the time hung up and felt rather disappointed that he had not gone on to equal or break the world's record. "He would surely have broken the record had there been anything to make him run," was his conclusion.

The world's record of 1:11 4/5 for six furlongs was made by Dick Welles as a three-year-old at Washington park, Chicago, in June, 1903. He carried only 100 pounds as compared to Roseben's 140, although the latter, of course, had the advantage of a year in age.

Dick Welles also holds the world's record for a mile over a circular track in 1:37 2/5. Roseben unfortunately is not a miler. His capacity is six furlongs, although he might possibly go seven in first-class company. But Dick Welles in his palmiest days could hardly have carried ten pounds over the scale and run as fast as Roseben does nearly once a week.

Roseben will not be seen at the races again this season. D. C. Johnson, his owner, believes he has done all that can reasonably be asked of any horse for one year, and he concedes Mr. Vought's inability to keep weight off him in handicaps. He has earned the penalty of greatness, but will not be asked to carry any greater weight imposts than he has already shouldered. Should a condition race be placed on any programme suitable for the horse he may be brought out for it. Roseben is a gelding and will, therefore, be kept at racing for as many years as he holds his form.

Beldame, one of the greatest race mares ever seen on the American turf, has finally been sent into retirement. She was shipped recently to August Belmont's nursery and in Kentucky. She will be mated with Meddler next spring. In her racing career Beldame won nearly $100,000, and her victories include some of the most important races on the Jockey club tracks. Last season as a three-year-old she was practically invincible, losing only two races out of thirteen. Her greatest honor this year was the winning of the Suburban handicap.

Cornell's Eleven.

Glenn Warner, at Cornell, has a lot of men to draw from for his eleven. Many are of last year's team, but some of the best are those who enter college this fall. The veterans were light men, but the "prep" school players have the weight, and Warner will be able to place on the gridiron a formidable eleven for the championship games.

Eddie Bald, Auto Racer.

Former Cycling Champion Eddie Bald, who as an auto racer scored an almost unbroken string of victories in hill climbs and track races this year, says that he will surely be in the racing game next season with a machine in which he can "win sitting up and back pedaling."

Advancer Retired.

Advancer, 2:11 1/2, winner of two big stakes on the great western circuit and whose winnings have been tied up pending investigation, has been retired for the season.

Grattan Bells, 2:13 1/2.

Grattan Bells, 2:13 1/2, has been sold to William J. McFarland of Philadelphia and goes to Ed Remon.

POSED AS ARTIST'S MODEL.

Lady of Noble Birth Compelled to Seek Employment to Earn Living.

A romantic episode has created quite a sensation in Berlin's artistic colony. A year ago a young lady called on a portrait painter in a western suburb and offered herself as a model. Her head attracted the artist, who engaged her, and she sat for several pictures. One day she failed to keep her appointment, and the artist had not the faintest inkling of what had become of her.

As he was sitting down to the table d'hôte at a well-known hotel at Kissingen last summer, the artist observed two well-dressed ladies opposite him, and recognized in the younger, now a beautiful lady of fashion, his long-lost model. The latter introduced him to her mother, an Austrian baroness of an old aristocratic family, and explained that, in consequence of financial collapse, she had been compelled to earn her living.

She had experienced difficulties in finding a post in an unknown city as a lady's companion, and, knowing she had graceful features, determined to adopt the calling of an artist's model. Later on her mother unexpectedly inherited a fortune, which enabled them to resume their proper position in society.

Scientific Discovery.

Liquid air and the high absorptive properties of charcoal are now used to secure high vacua. It has long been known that liquid air possesses the property of absorbing gases. Prof. Dewar, the English physicist, has lately demonstrated that this property is increased many fold when the charcoal is cooled to the temperature of liquid air. The absorption takes place so rapidly that if the charcoal is contained in a closed vessel the latter soon becomes empty of air.

Rocketteller's Brother.

Frank Rocketteller, the youngest and least known of the oil king's brothers, is reserved and unpretentious, his hobby being the taming of wild animals at his home near Cleveland, Wickliffe-on-the-Lake. On his Kars ranch he has raised 3,000 horses and 30,000 cattle.

OUR ENORMOUS EGG CROP

Over Forty-Three Million Crates Are Produced in the United States Annually.

The egg and poultry earnings of the United States for one recent year amounted to $280,000,000. Such an amount is sufficiently amazing as it stands, but you don't get its full significance until you study the relative financial values of other "industries," says Franklin Forbes, in Success Magazine. We find, for instance, that the total value of gold, silver, wool and sheep produced in America during the year in question was $272,434,315. The sugar production of the country the same year was but $20,000,000. That part of the wheat crop used at home, which many consider the most valuable of all our agricultural products, was worth $229,000,000. The great American hog, as consumed at home and abroad, brought $186,323,055. The value of the oat crop was $75,984,900. Potatoes grown in the United States were valued at nearly as large a sum as were the oats. The product of tobacco plantations was estimated to be worth $35,373,225. Cotton, the de-throned king of staples, could show only $259,161,640, as against the magnificent earnings of its feathered rival. The crops of flax, timothy, clover, millet and cane seeds, broom corn, castor beans, hay, straw and so forth, couldn't, all told, come within a measurably distance of many millions of the poultry earnings.

The hen's eggs produced in this country annually would fill 43,127,000 crates, each of the latter holding 350 eggs; also a train of refrigerator cars to carry these eggs would be nearly 900 miles long. Furthermore, it would take 107,818 such cars to make up this train.

TO STUDY THE PYGMIES

Purpose of Professor Starr's Expedition to Africa.

CAREFUL RESEARCH WILL BE MADE

Chicago University Anthropologist Intends to Camp With the Batwa Pygmies in Their Forest Retreats. Their Entire Life Is Given Up to Hunting and Fishing.

Professor Frederick Starr, the enthusiastic anthropologist of Chicago university, sailed from New York the other day for Africa on what is thought to be one of the most important ethnological expeditions of recent years, his especial mission being a year's sojourn in the wilds of the central African jungle to investigate the habits, customs, etc., of the pygmies, the yellow men and the cannibals of that region, says the New York Tribune. The remarkable black illipitians of Africa form one of the culmuses of the dark continent. Professor Starr hopes to throw new light upon their origin and ancestry by making a series of plaster casts, physical measurements, photographic records, moving pictures and hundreds of photographic negatives of them. For this purpose he takes with him an expert young Mexican photographer, Manuel Gonzales.

When asked for an outline of his plans, Professor Starr said: "I shall study the little Batwa pygmies and camp with them in their forest retreats. The pygmies are in no sense apish, as popularly supposed. The result of my investigations will, no doubt, go far to prove that they have been an unchanged race from their creation and not a degenerate people. I shall also make an investigation of the strange yellow and copper hued race of the African recently made known by Samuel Verner, the missionary scientist now in that country. He says that the traditions of these yellow men indicate no white ancestry. They have a traditional testimony of an unmixed descent for hundreds of years. They are superior in handicraft and culture to the native blacks and do not like to marry dark women."

"There are about as many of these yellow men in Africa as there are negroes in the United States. They are scattered through many different tribes. It is believed that they are the last survivors of a migration of peoples centuries ago into Africa from the region of the Nile and the Red Sea. Mr. Verner's preliminary account, both of the Batwa pygmies and the yellow negroes, practically an unknown race of mankind, has awakened a widespread desire among scientists for a more extended knowledge in regard to them, which can only come from careful and prolonged research, such as I propose making. The field is a rare and fascinating one for the ethnologist. The results may open up a new chapter of life on the dark continent."

Professor Starr's headquarters will be 1,100 miles in the interior, at Ndombé, in the Belgian Congo protectorate, the capital city of King Ndombé, who will aid him in carrying out his investigations. Large bands of the Batwa pygmies live in his territory. They pay him tribute by furnishing meat and game to supply his large household. King Ndombé is of a copper color, over six feet six inches tall and of Herculean build. He has a face expressive of kindly intelligence and a searching pair of brown eyes, each said to be as large as a quarter of a dollar. King Ndombé's domain is about as large as the state of New Jersey and contains some 100,000 inhabitants. The king is credited with possessing thirty-one wives and forty children.

A band of some 300 pygmies lives on the edge of King Ndombé's town. They dwell in beehive-like huts, formed of bent sticks covered with leaves and palm fibers, with an opening in the bottom just large enough for them to crawl through. The inside would be about the size of two good sized dry goods boxes. This cramped place shelters a man, wife and half a dozen children. A full grown native cannot stand erect or lie at full length in one of these structures. The more primitive pygmies are to be found far in the forest interior, where the tree dwelling tribes exist. Here cannibalism is met with, and some more or less dangerous and thrilling experiences may result. With pygmy guides and armed native attendants Professor Starr will pitch camp and carry on his observations within range of the deadly poisoned arrows of the tree hiding dwarfs, not yet introduced to white men.

Samuel Verner, now awaiting Professor Starr's arrival to introduce him to King Ndombé, and who was for many months practically a next door neighbor to the little black dwarfs, says the entire life of the little people is given up to hunting and fishing. They never till the soil or become agriculturists. Their principal weapon is the primitive bow, with poisoned arrows. The pygmies are often shorter than their bows. The poison they use is one of the most fatal known. It will cause death in from two to five minutes. Sometimes, instead of quick death, the wound, if inflicted upon a person, will cause insanity. A light scratch is sufficient to produce madness, and finally death by convulsions in about two weeks. There is no antidote yet discovered for this poison. Many a pygmy hunter is so expert that at seventy-five feet he can send an arrow through a rat scampering full speed across the ground. Their sense of smell is as keen as a dog's, and much of their game is discovered through the medium of the nose. Their peculiar species of diminutive dog does not bark, so a string of wooden bells is fastened about its neck to indicate its whereabouts while hunting.

The average height of the Batwa pygmy adult is about four feet, a few measuring four feet four. Many, however, are less than four feet. The women are a trifle shorter than the men. As a rule, a man has only one wife. They do not intermarry with the larger Africans, though living side by side; neither do they adopt their customs. The little people are sun worshippers. Their language is peculiar. The words denoting animals, for instance, are derived from sounds made by the beasts they describe. Elephant is "hum-ba, hum-ba." Snake is "huviya-wilya." The last has a rattling sound when pronounced, imitating of the reptile wriggling over leaves. Their vocabulary is limited. A special effort will be made by Professor Starr to get a full version of their odd phraseology on the phonograph. A language primer of the pygmies will be a novelty.

History records their existence for 5,000 years. They were mentioned by Herodotus. Some scientists think they were the aborigines of Africa and exclusively occupied in the remote past that vast territory, but a larger people invaded their domain, waged war upon them and drove them to the depths of the forest.

"ROAST YOUR GERMS."

Chicago Physician Tells Why "Bugs" Should Be Cooked.

"Roast your germs." This is the autumn rule of health which you must observe unless you wish to have an irritating throat cough throughout the breezy October and November days, according to Dr. Herman Spaulding, chief medical inspector of the city health department of Chicago. It appears, according to Dr. Spaulding, that a thorough, long, insistent roasting is guaranteed to make the worst "bad man" among the germs a harmless individual of the mildest nature, says the Chicago Record-Herald. But an unroasted germ is worse than a reckless chauffeur.

The germs to which Dr. Spaulding refers are those which have gathered in the dark recesses of the furnaces during the summer months, and he declares that the heat registers should not be opened until the germs have been roasted to a crisp brown.

"Before the registers are opened," said the doctor the other day, "the heat should be turned on and allowed to roast the germs and foreign material in the pipes. The heat will destroy the germs and prevent them from entering the rooms."

If the germs are not roasted they will mingle in the atmosphere, boasting their full virility, and will cause throat coughs of varying degrees of irritation. The principal germs are of the staphylococcus and streptococcus varieties. If they are not roasted they are as bad as their names.

SIMPLE LIFE TOO SLOW.

Only One Rev. Mr. Milburn Knows of It in the Penitentiary.

The "simple life" is not all that is claimed for it, according to the Rev. Joseph A. Milburn, says a Chicago dispatch.

"I don't believe in the simple life," said the pastor of Plymouth church in Chicago. "I want to live a full, rich life and get all there is out of it. The only simple life I know of is in the penitentiary."

"The regularity and simplicity make the life of the inmate. Now, it strikes me that a simple life outside of prison would grow monotonous and burdensome."

"You are teaching men to live right if you tell them that it is all right to strive for luxuries. I am dreadfully afraid of the man who is too good. The right kind of men are those who are good fellows, with equal emphasis on both words."

Wild Turkeys in Oklahoma.

Reports from southern Oklahoma county, in Oklahoma, especially in the vicinity of Okmulgee, state that wild turkeys, which for many years have been found only in the wildest places, are again beginning to appear along the creeks in bunches of from ten to thirty, says the Kansas City Journal. Their haunts have not been disturbed by hunters in recent years, and they are now multiplying rapidly. Quail are also abundant everywhere, and the early hatches will be in fine shape for the opening of the quail season on Dec. 15.

Beautiful Student Garb.

The students of Syracuse university are seriously talking about wearing corduroy trousers of orange color. The advocates thereof set forth that durability, beauty and economy will be introduced by the custom. The durability feature, says the Springfield Republican, will be admitted by every one who has tried to wear out a pair of corduroy trousers.

Free Lunch in a Church.

After having long been monopolized by the corner saloon, the "free lunch" has been adopted by a church in Cripple Creek, Colo. The pastor of the First Christian church places among his Sunday notices the following: "Lunch will be served immediately after church in the Endeavor room. Free to all who attend services."

Decay of Individuality.

The decay of individuality in England, says the London Graphic, is a most curious circumstance, and it is this that is injuring our literature and art. There is scarcely a writer who dares to strike out in a new line; his work would probably be rejected, however good it was. It is the same with art. What ordinary Englishman now ventures even to dress differently from those about him?

CHAS. J. DEVLIN DIES IN CHICAGO

Man Who Helped Boom Spring Valley, Ill., Victim of Paralysis.

CREDITORS ARE TO BE PAID

Receipts From Life Policy Likely to Enable Receiver of Bank in Topeka, Kan., to Settle in Full With Depositors.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Charles J. Devlin, banker and coal operator, whose failure for $4,000,000 last July caused the crash of the First National bank of Topeka, Kas., died at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning in St. Elizabeth's hospital, as the result of a stroke of paralysis.

The attack was the second he had suffered since the stroke that caused his collapse four months ago in the midst of his financial difficulties. He had spent three months in Europe seeking health, and his condition apparently was so much improved that he was on his way back home to Topeka, where he intended to set to work to rehabilitate his fortune and repay his creditors.

He carried insurance to the amount of $1,231,500, of which over one-half was assigned to the receiver of the bank in Topeka. In that city it was said that this windfall probably would enable the bank to pay its depositors in full.

Head of Many Enterprises.

Until his spectacular failure Mr. Devlin was head of twenty-six different companies, was one of the largest stock coal operators in the west, and stockholder in a string of banks reaching from Illinois to Kansas. He was one of the first men to open up the town of Spring Valley, Ill.

The first attack which Mr. Devlin suffered last July, was brought on by overwork. It came in the form of a cerebral hemorrhage, producing paralysis of the left side. As his affairs were in the hands of receivers, he placed his three eldest children in school in Chicago, took his wife and the other two children, and his old friend, the Rev. John F. Power of Spring Valley, and sought rest in Ireland.

For some time he was a victim of melancholia. But in the last few weeks his mind had cleared greatly, and when he arrived in New York on Oct. 25, he insisted on starting immediately for Chicago, for a conference with his friends.

Hospital Was His Home.

He arrived at St. Elizabeth's hospital last Saturday. This hospital, conducted by the Poor Handmaids of Jesus Christ, he always had considered his home in Chicago, and his gifts to the sisters had been many.

At 11 o'clock Tuesday morning he sat in his room talking to his wife and daughter, Blossom, when that look which his family had learned to dread suddenly spread over his face, and he sank to the floor.

"This is the last time, dear," he whispered to his wife. Dr. A. F. Kramps was summoned. The doctor is an old friend of the Devlin family, and he knew the end had come. The patient appeared to recover a little from the shock by noon. At 4 p. m., however, while all his family were about the bedside, he suffered another hemorrhage and became unconscious. He died ten hours later.

Mr. Porterfield at once began arrangements for the funeral of Mr. Devlin and for settling up his estate. George R. Peck, general counsel for the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, who is traveling in the east, was reached by telegram. He was a warm friend of Mr. Devlin, and is expected to return for the funeral in Spring Valley on Friday.
